Dear Friends,

Our 2014 graduates are a positive testament to the education offered at High Mowing School. Students emerge from High Mowing as confident, innovative individuals, connected to their life’s purpose and ready to contribute to and make a difference in society and the world community. Take a look at the many paths and universities this year’s graduates have chosen and you will get a sense of how empowered these young people are to pursue their life’s work.

Commitment to this school and this place runs deep for our graduates and community. The outpouring of support for our Frye Field campaign is evidence of this commitment. This year we had higher giving participation rates from all members of our community than ever before. And as I write this letter, we are closing in on the finish line for meeting our goal to conserve and purchase the Frye Field and adjoining land. Thank you all for the support.

This past year our faculty and staff have been deeply involved in planning for the future of our school. Our program development is focusing on the critical attributes, multiple literacies, and modes of delivery of a 21st-century education, while continuing to utilize the developmental approach to educating young people that is unique to High Mowing School and Waldorf education. Our approach instills a love of, and yearning for, lifelong learning, a hallmark of a High Mowing graduate! The rich high school education we offer here is becoming more exciting as this work of realizing our future objectives begins to manifest.

It is only with the ongoing support of all of you that it is possible for us to realize our objectives and continue to offer this gift to today’s young people. I invite and encourage you to participate and I extend a heartfelt thank you for your support.

Rea Gill, Executive Director
Mary Graham, President of the High Mowing Board of Trustees and Alumni Parent (’05 and ’13), addressed the 2014 graduating class. Here is an excerpt from her remarks.

As you leave High Mowing, here is what I hope you take forward with you:

Cultivate your imagination and your creativity. I believe that the practice of some kind of artistic endeavor is essential for effectively addressing the whole of life from a creative perspective. Without the arts, we too quickly forget our human capacity as creators.

Art is frequently considered a marginal activity. We are taught mathematics, for example, so that we develop certain capacities of rational, logical habits of thought. These are good things—but for some reason, the arts are not recognized in the same way: as a training ground for the development of imagination and creativity, which is the source of all new ideas—in math, science, language, indeed, all worthwhile human endeavor.

Creativity grows out of taking action. It’s not the pre-requisite, so don’t wait around for that lightning bolt of inspiration to get started. Creativity is a limitless resource given to all, not just a select few. It builds with practice, so, like everything else, the more you practice, the better you get at it, and the better you get, the more enjoyable it becomes. According to Albert Einstein, creativity is contagious, so pass it on!

The two most powerful forces that you have to give to the world (and to yourself) are your attention, and your love. One without the other is never enough, and everyone has a limitless capacity for both, so you can give generously without the fear that you will ever run out. In fact, both seem to grow and multiply the more you give. Think about that for a minute – how many things can we truly say that about?

So...what has High Mowing given you? Your parents and teachers have given you an education based in freedom, and encouraged you to think for yourselves. You’ve created your own textbooks, illustrated them, explored the world’s cultures and history, learned about the natural world, how to survive in the woods, performed in plays, concerts, and coffee houses, made beautiful and useful things with your hands, sang, and danced, and formed deep bonds of friendship and connection in your hearts.

But the greater part of what you leave here with may still be invisible to you – as it most likely is to your parents, teachers, and others who know you – and that is, that which, in you, has not been suppressed, taken away, obstructed or denied. The whole purpose and meaning of this place is to help clear the path for you, as much as possible in four years, so that you may exercise your birthright: to grow fully and without hindrance into the person you are here on this earth to become, and do the work you came to do.

So give it all you’ve got. Nothing else really matters.
